Says the N. C. Daily News :- "At the Taku forts the Chinese are very active in making preparations in the event of actual warfare. They are preparing booms for placing across the Peiho. These booms consist of logs of wood with chains rove through them. Torpedoes have already been laid in the channel. On the banks of the river in front of the northern and southern forts a large number of three-pointed caltrops have been placed, similar to those in use during the war of 1859-60. These caltrops are so constructed that, whichever way they fall, one point will always stick upwards. According to Chinese warfare, it is not considered as redounding to the honour of an army to attack a fort from the rear. As the Chinese are now aware that foreign commanders are not actuated with such fine distinctions of honour as to make an attack where the enemy is best prepared to receive it, Capt. SUPREME COURTS May 10th.

IN SUMMARY JURISDICTION. Before the Hon. J. Russell, Acting

CHIEF JUSTICE. Ho CHU v. CHUNG YU TING, $1,000. Mr. Caldwell for the plaintiff: the Attorne General (Hon. E. L. O'Malley), instructed by seamon, which moneys were not accounted for concorned. The plaintiff and two others were Donnys. The plaintiff now sought to recover his $1,000 from the defendant, and one of the other parties was also snoing. The case occupied the whole of Saturday. The Attorney-General argued that the plain tiff and those subscribing with him had handed their money to Lo Wai Nam, and it was Lo Wai Nam who in the first instance received the cheque him permission to apply the money as he had accepted a joint promissory note as security, but Ho Atim becoming a bankrupt, they did not like their security, and endeavoured to recover their money in this way.

Mr. Caldwell contended that Lo W. Nam was not a principal except with regard was obtained from the plaintiff and those with him, not as sureties, but for an express purpose. Chung Yu Ting know perfectly whence t came, and every circumstance connected with it, and, he (Mr. Caldwell) submitted, had no purely on pleasure bent! right to take the money as he had done. The plaintiff and those with him were interested in the property to the extent of $39,000, and it was therefore not surprising that they should ac vance the money as they had done. Chung Yu Ting knew that the money was not Lo Wa Nam's, and he had no right to have taken i Mr. Caldwell further contended that there was not enough proof that Lo Wai Nam was indebt ed to Chung Yn Ting to justify him in paying the latter this amount.

His Lordship reserved his decision.

Our correspondent says, "all was confusion throughont the night, and no one slept." To conceive a population of about seven hundred thousand Chinamen actually discarding the usually easy persuasion of Morphous, and wandering rest lessly about the City, is to picture a huge hiv of disturbed bees. The news was of course conreyed to all the surrounding villages. At Lu Chew, near Lingpo, a rich ex-Mandarin was ordered to at ones take 3,000 soldiers to guard place called Wu Leong Klang which he refused to do, assigning as a reason his advanced age 30 years) and also the inability of 3,000 men to hold the place named. Whether this old retired official will lose his head for his positive refusal to act, it is difficult to tell, but he will unques tionably forfeit his wealth. And all this scare occasioned by seven Officers of the French Navy was witnessed between six and seven o'clock on Saturday evening last from the Long Bridge. It appears that a native of Qwan Tao brought up some live stock for sale in the Foochow market, and the same not realizing the expected amount, he feared to return home and threw imself over the bridge. A crowd of natives of course soon congregated, when during the usua Chinese harangue, a native unwisely advanced the opinion that the suicide had not taken place. Chinese mobs do not differ from those of the Western World in enjoying unlimited excitement, and upon the present occasion vented their ire upon the unbeliever, to whom they first administered a severe nunishment, and then deliberately hurled him over the bridge to join the suicide. It must certainly be admitted that the ways of the Chinese are at least peculiar.—Herald

POETRY AND THE POOR. "The world is very bountiful?" I said, As yesterday, boside the brimming stream, Glad and alone, I watched the tremulous gleam Slant thro' the wintry wood, green-corpeted With moss and forn and carving bramble-spray, And bronze the thousand russet margin-reeds, . And in the sparkling holly glint end play,

And kindle all the brier's flaming seeds. "The world is very horrible?" I sighed, As in my wonted ways, to-day I thread Chill streets, deformed with dim monotony Hiding stronge inystories of unknown droad-The recking court, the breathless fover-den. The haunts where things unhely throng and brood Grim crime, the florce despair of strong armed men. Child-infamy, and shamoless womanhood.

And men have looked upon this pitcous thing-Blank lives my isited by beauty's spell— And said, "Let be: it is not meet to bring Dreams of sweet freedom to the prison cell. Sing them no songs of things all bright and fair, Paint thom no visions of the glad and free, Lest with purged sight their miseries they see, And, thro' vain longings, pass to blank despair."

O brother, treading over darkening ways, O sister, whelmed in ever deopening care, Whom God we might unfold before your gaze Some vision of the pure, and true, and fair! Better to know, the sadder things be known, Better to see, the tears half blind the sight, Than thraldom to the sense, and heart of stone. And horrible contentment with the night.

O! bring we then all sweet and gracious things To touch the lives that lie so chill and drear, That they may dream of some diviner sphere, Whence each soft ray of love and beauty springs. Each good and perfect gift is from above; And there is healing for Earth's direct wood: God bath muscaled the springs of light and love, To make the desert blossom as the rose. -Speciator.

"To have as much work to do as one can do, and a little more," has been given as the best recipe for cheerfulness and contentment; but while readily concurring in the first part of the sentiment (remarks Mr. L. B. Walford in Good Words), we cannot but suggest that it may be, perchance, that very "little more" which is at the root of half the ill health, pale faces, and fractious nerves of present day. It is that last drop in the already full cup, that last straw on the already well-laden back, which is too much, only for two or three days, after which she just one degree too much for the sorely left ber bony partner, and returned home to pressed men and women who are fighting in her parents! and the skeleton immediately the fight of life, and it is that overplus from They will not see it; they will not do it. practically no corpus of his own to speak of, being alphabetical. HOW TO MAKE BABIES SLEEP. Sir Joseph Fayror, President of the Medical Society, and the first authority in the in a new capacity, with an infalible receipt for soothing freeful children to sleep, In nearly every Himalayan village the native bady is placed in a trough, into which there trickles a constant stream of water. This falling upon the vertex of the cranium induces sleep. Children lie in their trought for hours asleep while their mothers go about their work. We fear Sir Joseph in this country. After a day or two's expesure in the water trough the child would probably sleep the sleep that knows no waking. The system may work in India. but it cannot be guaranteed us safe for home application.

AN APOLOGY. George the Third was popular with the English people. They respected him for the purity of his domestic life, and called him "Farmer George" on account of his plebeian ways and his good nature. The King loved to mingle familiarly with his subjects, and cared little for the Court eliquette which made a hedge about him. One day, while returning from hunting, the King entered into conversation with his wine-merchant, Mr. Cabornel. The two rode side by side a Walsingham, the gentleman-in-waiting. Watching his opportunity, his lordship took the merchant aside and whispered something in his car. "What's that? What's that Walsingham has been saying to you? "asked the good-humoured King, secing that the merchant appeared annoyed. "I find, sir," said the merchant, "that I have been unintentionally guilty of disrespoet to your Majesty. My lord informs me that I ought to take off my hat whenever address your Majesty. But your Majesty will please to notice that my hat is fastened to my head, and I am on the back of a spirited horse. So that if anything goes off, we must all go off together."

The King laughed heartily at the apology, and bade the merchant keep on his bat. -

UNHAPPILY MATED. A leading living skeleton in New York lately became the husband of a bride of average weight and dimensions, and this mixed marriage created much attention at the time. People were anxious to know how it would turn out, and it has turned out badly. The lady's eccentric affection lasted proceeded to take out a writ of habeas corpus case. He could not possibly have married a female Skeleton, because there is none on exhibition at present, and to have married tent and trouble, since, the journal says, "the two would pass their lives in envying one another.
